Cites 'Art Of Espionage' Of U.S. 'Antagonist'

Washington, Feb. 17 (49)-Allen Dulles, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, opposes any further congressional curbs on the CIA.

"We are faced with an antagonist that has raised the art of espionage to an unprecedented height," he warned.

"Must Be Forewarned"

Dulles said an intelligence service in this day of nuclear power "cannot wait for evidence of the likelihood of hostile acts against us until after the decision to strike. has been made by another power. Our Government must be foravarned and forearmed.

"Also, there are times when our press is overzealous in seeking 'scoops' with regard to future diplomatic, political and military moves. We have learned the importance of secrecy in time of war, although even then there have been serious indiscretions at times. But it is well to recognize that in the 'cold war' our adversary takes every advantage of what we divulge openly or make
